

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from any objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 50c and $1 bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

yarn, from which all sorts of textile issues can be made in the ordinary way, equalling in appearance, durability and fastness of color the best of cotton goods. The method is not only applicable to cellulose, but also to every sort of short fibrous material—for instance, rags, scraps of cotton and linen goods. The fibre, whether paper pulp or textile refuse, can be dyed before being spun into yarn, so that the dyeing of the woven material is not necessary.

Emin Pasha, the German Savant, whose discovery and rescue by Stanley cost so much money, labor and life, has just been killed with all his followers in Central Africa.

The Presbytery of Charleston, S. C., has just adopted a ruling sustaining the action of a church in that city in expelling from its membership a young lady who was compelled to work four hours every Sunday in the Telephone Exchange. The pastor of the church preached a sermon on Sabbath observance and in it said that any member of his church who thereafter worked on Sunday would be expelled. The young lady Miss Sadie Means, who is obliged to make her own living as well as to support an invalid father, gave no heed to the injunction of the pastor, but continued to work as required by the Telephone Company, not having any other means of subsistence. She was expelled from the church as stated.

Miss Georgiana Willis, a young woman of Fulton, Ky., threw herself in front of a train on a Third Avenue elevated road in New York last week and was killed. It was believed to be caused by her mind being unbalanced by family troubles.

The Tradesman says: There will be at the World's Columbian Fair a complete British railway passenger train; and it will doubtless attract much attention. The compartment system of England, with its side entrance to each, the conductor (guard they call him) finding his way to the different rooms on a runaway along the outside of the car, will never become popular in this country, for several reasons, but our people will be interested in knowing how their English cousins travel.

Bowling Green, Ky., has "gone dry." This is the direct result of the preaching of Sam Jones. Some of the citizens of that city got up a purse of $2,300, and induced Sam Jones to come there and inaugurate a revival. He did so, and succeeded in inducing over 2,500 people to make profession of religion. In his preaching he made a vigorous crusade against saloons. As a result of this, the City Council of Bowling Green has refused to re-issue any saloon licenses, so that the forty three saloons will be closed.

"I made a bad break in my sermon yesterday," said the village pastor.

"What was it?" asked the editor.

"Well, I said that many were called, but few are chosen; and every member of my congregation is a candidate for post-office!"

LUCILLE.

Dr. Harrisse, like most men, was fond of a pretty face, and when he caught one glimpse of Lucille's as the wind blew her veil aside on the homeward trip of the Malta he wished he was her cousin or the stout ship surgeon who dared offer her his arm for a promenade. There was something almost familiar in the face too. Where had he met her? At what german reception, in the salons of the best society or in the wards of some hospital? Or was it only a trick of imagination? Had he waltzed with her at some seaside hop or taken her out at some state dinner or wedding breakfast?

Dr. Harrisse was a bold man in his way. The few days on the Malta had hung like lead on his hands, there being but a handful of cabin passengers, and many of those without their sea legs. He was a man quick to think, but somewhat forgetful. His eyes met Lucille's. A smile of recognition illumined her face. He bowed confidently and advanced toward her.

"I am happy to meet you again," he said unblushingly. "Perhaps you find it as dull aboard as I do?"

"If you are at your wits' end for amusement, as I am, I'm sorry for you," she said. "My poor aunt has not been able so far to lift her head from the pillow."

"Who the deuce do I know with the appendage of an aunt?" Harrisse mentally considered. "However, it doesn't signify if she is only amusing and the aunt is not an ogre."

The ship's surgeon, Dr. Johns, consulted his watch.

"I'll be obliged to deliver you to the tender mercies of Dr. Harrisse, Miss Lindsay," he said as he hurried away.

"You see I am lame still," she presently remarked.

"Is it possible?" he returned, feeling as if he was groping in the dark. Had one of his acquaintances suffered an accident which had escaped his memory? She took it for granted that he was familiar with the circumstances. A misstep might expose him. "But doubtless it will wear off in time," he hazarded.

"I fear not. You don't realize that the accident happened six years ago. I used it too soon. I must ride, you know, at that time or die. It was weak, and I got another fall and broke it again."

"I am sorely sorry to hear it," said Dr. Harrisse.

Was it possible that he had known this blooming creature six years and had neglected to cultivate her? Now he would learn by experience and make the most of the present.

"Is this your first visit abroad?"

"Yes, I have been away five years. I call Europe my schoolroom. I didn't know anything when I left America except riding, you know. I was a perfect dunce. I have studied the arts and languages. I can sing and speak to you in five tongues."

"With the tongues of men and angels. I've no doubt."

"I can paint you a picture that will not be half bad. Have I not used my opportunities?"

"I would to heaven I had used mine half so well."

And then the interesting subject was allowed to drop.

But Lucille and Dr. Harrisse had a thousand other things to discuss. He delighted in a woman who dared to disagree with him. They found that they had just missed each other at Interlachen; that he had only been prevented by a chance from joining the party with which she had made the ascent of Mount Blanc. They had mutual friends abroad, but still the great enigma, where he had known her in America, remained unsolved.

But he troubled himself very little about it just now. He was drifting with the tide. He was passing through a new phase of existence. He had believed himself invincible, and behold, he had been conquered by the "touch of hand, turn of head." It was absurd perhaps for a man of his years to be so easily enchanted. He rather longed for the end of the voyage in order to discover if it was only the glamour of a pretty face and a sweet manner that fascinated him. He assured himself that it would.

It seemed to Dr. Harrisse about this time that Dr. Johns was always joining them, that he had a weakness himself for Miss Lindsay, and Harrisse smiled, thinking how futile it was.

"You remember Captain Hamerton?" asked Dr. Johns on one of these occasions, when the talk had somehow drifted upon love and marriage.

"Oh, certainly," said Harrisse, wishing Captain Hamerton and Dr. Johns were in the Red Sea, figuratively speaking.

"I remember him—an ancient mariner or somebody, eh?"

"Well, you know, he fell in love with a circus rider. Fact. And he got it a day. Real love affair."

"Oh, well," said Dr. Harrisse, "there must be nauteh girls and circus riders perhaps, but we don't choose our wives and sweethearts from among them."

"I think I must go below," said Lucille, "the sun is withering."

Naturally enough Lucille was tired of the surgeon's reminiscences. Naturally she felt no interest in the vulgar loves of circus riders and old baux.

"You will miss the sunset," he said aside, detaining her. "Dr. Johns will be gone presently. Let us see the evening star come out together on the last night at sea."

"And I suppose he married her and lived happily ever after," said Harrisse, having carried his point and turning to Dr. Johns.

"No, she wouldn't marry him, but when he died he left her a fortune, and she left the profession."

"And the Hamertons were of the Mayflower stock."

"Do you know—can you guess, Lucille—can you guess who my love is?"

"I was never good at enigmas," a little indistinctly.

"Dr. Harrisse, do you remember when you first met me?"

"It seems to me that I have known you always," he evaded.

"I thought that you remembered when I first saw you here."

"Could I ever forget you, Lucille?"

"It seems so," smiling faintly. "But I have a confession to make."

"So have I."

"You will believe that I have deceived you."

"If this be deception, let me be deceived forever."

She smiled faintly.

Here Dr. Johns joined them again.

When they parted the next morning, he said:

"I shall see you, if I may, at the first available moment in the week. If anything prevents, I shall write."

Sitting down to dine the following day with his bosom friend, he said:

"Tom, you know everything and everybody: can you tell me where I met a Miss Lucille Lindsay?"

"She was the person Captain Hamerton wanted to marry. You remember old Hamerton?"

"Yes."

"Forty years her senior. He tempted her with jewels as Faust tempted Marguerite with kindness and luxury, but although she was only a poor little circus rider she wouldn't have him. When he died, he left her half his big estate. I heard she was at abroad. She broke a bone falling from her horse in the circus. I suppose I must have set it. Gone, eh? Been on the ragged edge of flirtation on the voyage? Fancy a Harrisse marrying a circus rider! How Deacon street would howl!"

Dr. Harrisse was perhaps thankful that his patients demanded his attention, and gave him no time to think or visit at once, and that an important case made it impossible, as he said to himself, to do other than to postpone Miss Lindsay. One day he met Dr. Johns coming away from her presence. He had an air of suppressed excitement about him. It was a year ago they had parted on the Malta. "The fellow is almost handsome," thought Harrisse, "and he is in love with Lucille."

He acted upon his determination to call, but Miss Lindsay was engaged with a headache and begged Dr. Harrisse would excuse her.

The words sounded strangely to him; he felt dazed and miserable and angry with Dr. Johns, as if his visit had something to do with it. All at once the fact that Lucille had begun life as a circus rider seemed trivial and of no importance compared with the greater fact that he loved her. Let those laugh who win.

He never remembered having been in such a hurry before in his life. Why had he postponed happiness so long? It was late in the following day when he received Lucille's reply:

Your kind words—she wrote—have carried me back to those halcyon days on the Malta, when I believed myself as desperately in love as you believe yourself to be today. I confessed all this to Dr. Johns when he proposed to me yesterday morning, and he was willing to absolve me—

Dr. Harrisse tossed the letter into the grate and went out to his patients.

It was perhaps half a dozen years later.

The New Malta Cultivator.

There is not another Walking Cultivator made that will do as good work under all circumstances as this one. It has all the latest improvements, adjustable high steel arch, split tongue, steel wheels with removable box, parallel steel beam gangs, new appliances, coil springs which are easily adjusted to any tension by the simple use of a thumb screw; can move the points close together or far apart; can also use three calf tongues on each gang if desired.

Our new riding cultivator for 1893 is by far the best on the market. No wood to rot or shrink; no cast iron or pot metal to break; have stood the test for twenty years. Call and see them.

when looking over some old papers he happened on the charred remnants of Lucille's letter, which his servant had rescued from the fire and folded away. He opened it curiously and lingered over it fascinated.

I confessed all to Dr. Johns when he proposed to me yesterday morning—it read—but if you love me—poor Dr. Johns! I should like to punish you. I should like to quote to you, "There must be nauteh girls and circus riders perhaps, but we don't choose our wives and sweethearts from among them," and refuse your gift—but love you. LUCILLE.
